Apples	Primarily King of Tompkins County, with a small amount of unknown varieties from Kouf orchard
Soil	clay-loam
Farming	No sprays, unfertilized, dry-farmed, and only dormant pruning
Orchard	The King apples come from old Port Washington orchards, all planted between 1910 and 1940. Remaining varieties from the 50-year-old Kouf Orchard
Production	Juice was fermented with native yeasts, and racked three times, to slow the ferment down and preserve more delicate flavors and aromas. Bottled pét-nat-style, with some sugar remaining, 3 months after pressing. Undisgorged. Only 60 cases produced.
Vessel	Stainless steel
Impression	Dry and juicy, with a chalky texture, and the creamy popsicle inflection from pét-nat bottling

Cellar Practices

- Indigenous Fermentation
- No Fining
- No Filtering
- No Additives
